BUDAPEST'S LARGEST AND OLDEST INDOOR MARKET

Browse the countless stalls of Budapest's Grand Market Hall and taste Hungarian delicacies. The historic hall was built during the late 19th century, a sprawling three-story marketplace with a neo-Gothic facade. Today, the bustling scene is a feast for the senses, an endless array of textures, fragrances, tastes and sounds. Stroll with your guide and get acquainted with the massive market's layout, browsing the stalls of vendors displaying aperitifs, breads, meats, wine, honey, strudels and more. On the ground floor, farm produce, pastries, candies, spices and spirits tempt the palate. Eateries and souvenirs are on the second floor. Locals head to the basement to see the butchers and fish vendors. After your market tour, enjoy free time to peruse the emporium on your own, then walk to a nearby traditional restaurant for a taste of Hungarian delicacies.

* Easy - Walking portions are generally over easy surfaces with few steps or inclines. Total time walking or standing is normally not longer than 1.5 hours.
